has participated in the

Operator Track: Data Scientist

Hands-on workshops, September – December 2021

The cross-discipline training program “Data Train–Training in Research Data Management and Data Science” for doctoral researchers from member institutions of the cooperation network “U Bremen Research Alliance” teaches competencies in data literacy, research data management and data science. The program is associated with consortia of the German National Research Data Infrastructure (NFDI) initiative.

In the Operator Track Data Scientist methods from mathematics, statistics, artificial intelligence and computer science for data analysis and further data science competencies are conveyed. These competencies were addressed in thematic workshops.

Grace Eze has participated in the following workshops:

Quantitative analyses for data science / Machine learning / Evaluating machine learning and artificial intelligence algorithms / Computational social sciences /
